

Alexis Ohanian

Alexis Ohanian is a technology entrepreneur and investor. He currently serves as General Partner and Founder of Seven Seven Six, a software-enabled venture firm focused on people, culture, and community. Previously Alexis co-founded Initialized, an early stage venture capital firm, and Reddit, the social news aggregation, web content rating, and discussion website. He's also written a national bestselling book, Without Their Permission.

Amy Wu

Amy Wu is Head of Ventures & Gaming at FTX Ventures, where she leads ventures, gaming, M&A and commercial initiatives for FTX's $2 billion venture capital fund. Before joining FTX Ventures, Amy was a partner at Lightspeed Venture Partners, a multi-stage venture fund, where she led crypto and gaming investments, including the fund's investment in FTX. She was previously an executive at Discovery, Inc., a global media company, where she led operations and finance across Asian markets, digital businesses, and sports.

Maaria Bajwa

Maaria Bajwa, Principal at Sound Ventures, is an early stage venture investor in companies across crypto, fintech, retail, consumer and healthcare. Prior to joining Sound Ventures, Maaria spent 5 years at LA-based investment advisor, ICG Advisors, where she sourced and diligenced opportunities across all different alternative asset classes, including venture capital.

Yat Siu

Yat Siu is Co-founder & Chairman of Animoca Brands, a game software and venture capital company. A leader in digital entertainment, blockchain, and gamification, Animoca Brands has a portfolio of more than 150 investments in NFT-related companies and decentralized projects that are contributing to building the open metaverse. Before co-founding Animoca Brands, Yat founded Outblaze, a technology company that delivers digital entertainment, smartphone apps & games, and Web 2.0 products. Prior to starting Outblaze, Yat set up Hong Kong Cybercity, the first free web page and email provider in Asia.

Dean Steinbeck

Dean Steinbeck is President & General Counsel at Horizen Labs, a leading blockchain development company that specializes in web3 tools and services. Dean has over a decade of experience representing traditional VC-backed software development companies, most recently serving as General Counsel to TigerConnect, a secure and regulatory compliant communication platform used in over 4,000 healthcare facilities.